4 tips for talking with your Muslim child about LGBTQIA+ rights

Prepare yourself to speak and listen without judgement

When you practice openness with your child, you provide a safe space for them to share their feelings and questions while you express your unconditional love for them.

Discuss the kindness of the Prophet (PBUH)

Reference the Prophet (PBUH) who said "Kindness is a mark of faith, and whoever is not kind has no faith", as a model of compassion and empathy towards all people

Talk about Islam's universal values

Share some of the human rights values in the Qur'an, like peace, compassion, and mercy and why it is so important to practice these values.

Reference God's creation of diversity

Talk about how the presence of diversity between humans is a sign of God, just like the presence of diversity in all of God's creations.
